Re: RV trailers on Lake Clear

My position on this topic is this:

I have no problem with one trailer per property for visitor overload. What I do not like to see is several trailers on a property making the property look like a trailer park. That does not add to the value of the neighbour's property.

If an RV is hooked up to water and sewage on the property would that not be taxable as a separate property residence.

I would advise council to perhaps look at the zoning by laws in townships that contain a number of cottages. No use reinventing the wheel!!

It will not be easy to please all of those concerned with decisions that have to be made and I wish Council well.

Sincerely,

Guy Jamieson
